

Adjunct Faculty to Teach Biological Psychology: Spring 2015

The Department of Psychology at Hillsdale College is searching for an adjunct instructor (PhD preferred but ABD and MA considered) to teach a Biological Psychology course in the Spring of 2015 (January 14 to May 6). Hillsdale College Psychology students are bright and engaged learners as evidenced by the 98th percentile on the national standardized ETS Major Fields Test (ETS-MFT) in Psychology earned by our 2014 graduating class.

Hillsdale is a small (1400 full-time, residential students), fully-accredited, nonsectarian, independent college of liberal arts, committed to the Western tradition, informed by Judeo-Christian faith, and dedicated to excellence in teaching undergraduate students. Hillsdale students are known for their intellectual curiosity and capacity (ACT average 29; SAT average 1933) as well as their love of learning. Hillsdale (with an average class size of 15) is consistently ranked among America's best colleges by National Review, Forbes, The Princeton Review, and U.S. News & World Report.

Review of applications will begin immediately. Complete applications will include: a letter of application, a curriculum vitae, transcripts, statement of teaching interests, and three up-to-date letters of recommendation. Send materials to: Dr. Kari McArthur, Psychology Department Chairwoman and Associate Professor of Psychology, Hillsdale College, 33 East College Street, Hillsdale, MI 49242. Email inquiries may be addressed to kmcArthur@hillsdale.edu. EOE.

Adjunct Faculty to Teach Learning and/or Biological Psychology: Fall 2015

The Department of Psychology at Hillsdale College is searching for an adjunct instructor (PhD preferred but ABD and MA considered) to teach a Learning Psychology and/or a Biological Psychology course in the Fall of 2015 (September 2 to December 19). Hillsdale College Psychology students are bright and engaged learners as evidenced by the 98th percentile on the national standardized ETS Major Fields Test (ETS-MFT) in Psychology earned by our 2014 graduating class.

Hillsdale is a small (1400 full-time, residential students), fully-accredited, nonsectarian, independent college of liberal arts, committed to the Western tradition, informed by Judeo-Christian faith, and dedicated to excellence in teaching undergraduate students. Hillsdale students are known for their intellectual curiosity and capacity (ACT average 29; SAT average 1933) as well as their love of learning. Hillsdale (with an average class size of 15) is consistently ranked among America's best colleges by National Review, Forbes, The Princeton Review, and U.S. News & World Report.

Review of applications will begin immediately. Complete applications will include: a letter of application, a curriculum vitae, transcripts, statement of teaching interests, and three up-to-date letters of recommendation. Send materials to: Dr. Kari McArthur, Psychology Department Chairwoman and Associate Professor of Psychology, Hillsdale College, 33 East College Street, Hillsdale, MI 49242. Email inquiries may be addressed to kmcArthur@hillsdale.edu. EOE.